

Eco tourism, also identified as environmental tourism, is accounted travel to frail, immaculate, and typically secluded areas that endeavor to be small contact and small level. It helps instruct the explorer; provides finances for protection; directly profit the monetary development and political empowerment of neighboring communities; and fosters admiration for diverse cultures and for individual rights.

Pro-poor tourism

The pro poor sightseeing have to help the very poorest in mounting countries has been getting growing interest by those implicated in expansion and the subject has been addressed either during small level projects in home communities and by ministry of Tourism attempting to magnetize massive numbers of tourists.

Decline tourism

Decline tourism is a tour tendency, which evolved by means of the earth monetary disaster. Recognized by American entrepreneur Matt Landau (2007), decline tourism is defined by inexpensive, high-value experiences taking place of once-popular nonspecific retreats. Diverse decline tourism hotspots have seen trade boom through the slump appreciation to relatively low costs of income and a slow world job marketplace telling travelers are elongating trips where their wealth travels extra.

Health tourism

When there is a major price variation among countries for a specified health process, principally in Southeast Asia (tourists can get Vietnam visa online), India, Eastern Europe and where there are diverse rigid regimes, in relative to particular health trial (e.g. dentistry), traveling to take benefit of the cost or regulatory differences is frequently referred to as "health tourism".

Instructive or Learning tourism

Instructive tourism urbanized, as of the emergent recognition of training and wisdom of information and the enhancing of practical capability outside of the classroom environment. In instructive tourism, the major center of the tour or free time activity includes visiting another country to study about the traditions, such as in Student Exchange Programs and Study Trips.

Innovative tourism

Innovative tourism has existed as a shape of educational tourism, since the early period of sightseeing itself. Its European heredity to the time of the Grand Tour saw the sons of noble families traveling for the reason of mostly interactive, learning experiences. More lately, innovative tourism has been given its own name by Crispin Raymond and Greg Richards.

Dark tourism

One promising area of unique interest has been acknowledged by Lennon and Foley (2000) as "dark" tourism. This kind of tourism involves visits to "dark" sites, such as battlegrounds, scenes of dreadful crimes or acts of genocide, for example: awareness camps. Dark tourism remains a little niche market, driven by various motivations, such as bereavement, commemoration, learning, macabre inquisitiveness or even leisure.

Destiny tourism

Also known as Tourism of destiny or Last Chance Tourism this promising trend involves traveling to places that are environmentally or else endangered before it is too delayed.
